

Anthropology 3

Omkar Tasgaonkar
otasgaonkar@ucla.edu

This is a description of the notes and intended goals/topics that will be covered in them.

Textbooks Used to Develop these Notes:

1. Textbook - Author

Other Textbooks Referenced:

1. Textbook - Author

Notes Last Updated: September 29, 2026

Contents

1	Week One Readings	3
1.1	Soccer as Ethnography	3
1.2	Sport, Anthropology, and History	3

NOTE: Any sections/subsections marked with an asterisk are extra sections and have been added to this document as extensions of introduced theory.

1 Week One Readings

1.1 Soccer as Ethnography

This article is about a professor and his students actually playing soccer with people from various backgrounds to understand how cultures and identities can be studied through sports and the actions/reactions of the players on the court.

1. One observation of the players and professor was that fact that cultural identities and differences were put aside during the game and the Kurdish players and students eventually developed trust with each other
 - (a) In a way, the professor remarked that passing the ball is a moment of building trust between teammates
 - (b) Another student said that during soccer, one does not need to forget who they are or pretend they are something else
 - (c) Cultural identities mesh together and the sport becomes a form of connection and immediate attention
2. Another observation was the Kurdish players' lack of passing to female students, likely due to cultural upbringings and biases
 - (a) So cultural identities and differences still can affect how sport is played, but not to the degree of other interactions
3. The article also discussed the different life of the asylum seekers and their desires to return to their homeland and the struggles faced in obtaining employment and financial stability

1.2 Sport, Anthropology, and History

- 1.